PARTICIPATING ARTISTS

Ahmarnya Price, Alan Grace, Alexis West, Brigid Noone, Dan Koerner, Ellen Steele, Emily Stewart, Emma Beech, Emma Hall, Emma McManus, Halcyon Macleod, Henry Wood, Ingrid Voorendt, Josie Were, Jude Adams, Kelly Doley, Mark Rogers, Matt Daniels, Meg Wilson, Nathan Harrison, Nick Roux, Nikki Kennedy, Phillip Kavanagh, Rachel Heller-Wagner, Tristan Louth-Robins, Tristan Meecham, Troy Reid and Willoh S. Weiland.

ADHOCRACY is Vitalstatistix's national hothouse, supporting the creative development of new experimental and interdisciplinary arts projects. Artists from around Australia join us to create, converse and critique in one space (our beautiful, heritage-listed home, Waterside) over the June Queen's Birthday long weekend.

ARTISTS spend the long weekend in an open studio environment developing new works which span performance, live art, sound, installation and more. They are in the early stages of the process of making and are experimenting with ideas and form. You can engage with the artists and their creative process through a public program of artist talks and work-in-progress showings.

THIS YEAR there are eight projects in development at Adhocracy. Seven of these were selected from a national call; they undertake a four day intensive creative development, commencing on Friday, an artist-only day, and working through the long weekend. The eighth is our annual residency project – we invite an Australian artist or group to collaborate with South Australian artists on a new work through a two week residency in the lead-up to Adhocracy. We are thrilled that this year's residency team, led by Halcyon Macleod and Willoh S. Weiland, will present showings of Crawl Me Blood at the newly renovated Hart's Mill Flour Shed, a very short walk from Waterside.

ADHOCRACY IS A FESTIVAL OF IDEAS MEETS INTENSE ART CAMP MEETS MAGIC HOUSE PARTY. WE ENCOURAGE YOU TO GET AMONGST SOME OF AUSTRALIA'S MOST EXCITING ESTABLISHED AND EMERGING MAKERS OF AUSTRALIAN CONTEMPORARY CULTURE, ART, PERFORMANCE AND COMMENTARY.

EMMA WEBB, JASON SWEENEY & PAUL GAZZOLA
CURATORS, ADHOCRACY 2015

Vitalstatistix and the Adhocracy curators acknowledge that we, and our home Waterside, are on Kurna country. We acknowledge the Kurna people as the continuing custodians of the Adelaide Plains. We honour their spiritual relationship with this land and we thank them for welcoming us. We pay respect to the Kurna Elders and through them to all Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

MAKE THE MOST OF ADHOCRACY

READ THIS PROGRAM

Get familiar with the eight projects participating in this year's hothouse and the schedule for the weekend, so you can work out where your interests lie. Biographies of the participating artists can be viewed at vitalstatistix.com.au.

MAKE A DAY OF IT OR MAKE A WEEKEND OF IT

Come for a full day, ready for an intense experience, and you will be able to see a number of the projects in quick succession. Come in and out over the weekend and you can see the projects as they change and develop. No need to book. Entry by donation.

MAKE YOURSELF COMFORTABLE

A bar and food is available at Adhocracy, and there's plenty of space to sit, chat and relax. Take the opportunity to talk to artists and others participating in the weekend.

BUT NOT TOO COMFORTABLE...

Yes, make yourself comfortable but also move around! To get the most out of Adhocracy make sure you explore the different spaces that artists are occupying at our beautiful, heritage-listed venue, Waterside Workers Hall. Challenge yourself to take the leap into an experience. Say yes.

INFORMATION

Throughout the event there will be regular announcements alerting you to upcoming showings and talks. There is a map of all artists' studios on-site and plenty of Adhocracy hosts to guide, suggest and take you to where you need to be for what you want to see, including to this year's new off-site studio at Hart's Mill Flour Shed.

TRANSPORT

Waterside is accessible by bus (route numbers 150, 117, 118, 230, 232, 252 and 254) and train (Outer Harbour line, Port Adelaide or Ethelton stations). For public transport information visit adelaidemetro.com.au. Waterside is a direct and easy 20-minute drive from Adelaide CBD. We have free parking right next door at the Port Adelaide TAFE.

ALTERNATIVE FUTURES WORKING GROUP

Kelly Doley NSW

Alternative Futures Working Group is a research project exploring perceptions of the future and conversations as artworks. This project is part of artist Kelly Doley's creative-led PhD at the University of New South Wales and aims to ask critical questions about performance as a research tool and ways of translating the social, live and embodied experience of conversation into images of social change. The project draws widely from feminist and social engagement theory, including those of Paulo Friere and bell hooks.

Alternative Futures Working Group is part of a larger series of Groups performances the artist will be staging in different locations throughout the next year. The findings from the Groups research process will inform an exhibition of visual prototypes, that picture alternative political structures and social sustainability, in 2016 –17.

AWKWARD SEX SCENES

Ahmarnya Price, Dan Koerner & Ingrid Voorendt VIC

Awkward Sex Scenes is a new performance work in its first stage of creative development that explores discomfort with representations of sex when in the presence of others, be it in visual art, theatre, TV, dance or film. The artists, whose practices cross performance-making and visual art, are interested in unpacking artistic and popular representations of sex with a focus not so much on the artworks, but the role of a live viewing audience.

The artists are experimenting with these themes through collecting and fragmenting examples of sound, music, video, visual art, performance and photography; documenting, recreating and playing with responses to the materials; exploring the idea of being watched while watching; and investigating the politics and effects of proximity. Expect unfortunate stories, awkward special guests and naughty movies.

CRAWL ME BLOOD

Halcyon Macleod, Willoh S. Weiland
& collaborators TAS, VIC & SA

Crawl Me Blood is an ambitious work-in-development, which uses the sinister eden of the tropical garden and the gossip-ridden, music-blasting medium of live radio to explore the myths we make of paradise. It is inspired by the work of Jean Rhys, whose book Wide Sargasso Sea expounds the landscape and race relations of post-colonial Dominica.

As this year's Adhocracy residency project, the lead artists will work with a team of South Australian collaborators for a fortnight to explore the text, sound and design, which will eventually include a radio docu-drama and a live installation experience. We are excited to extend the footprint of Adhocracy by presenting showings of this creative development at the recently renovated Hart's Mill Flour Shed, a short walk from Waterside.

FUTURE TURF

Emily Stewart, Emma Hall, Henry Wood
& Rachel Heller-Wagner NSW & VIC

Future Turf is a performance installation exploring the relationship between the built environment, home and the human form. The concept of 'home' is ever-changing and contested globally. Home ownership in Australia is at its lowest point since the 1950s, and one-third of the three billion inhabitants of the world's cities and towns live in slums. Locally the politics of land ownership and home rub up against broad social concerns such as coal seam gas and mining exploration, the closure of remote Aboriginal communities and climate change.

Through this first creative development of Future Turf, the collaborating artists whose practices cross performance-making, text, dance and design, will explore these themes alongside the world of this new work and the performance of architecture and speculative futures.

JARROD DUFFY IS NOT DEAD

Applespiel NSW

Jarrold Duffy was the ninth member of Applespiel, who studied with the group at the University of Wollongong. In October 2010, two weeks before performing an Honours show, he disappeared, leaving behind the furniture at his house and no explanation. Phone, email, facebook all yielded no results. Jarrold Duffy Is Not Dead is the story of that disappearance and Applespiel's hunt to find their missing friend.

Drawing on a wide range of interest points, including the rise of crowd-funding, the cult popularity of podcasts such as This American Life's Serial and the ethics of personal stories in theatre, Jarrold Duffy Is Not Dead is a complex and playful exploration of truth, now in its second stage of creative development after spending time with Hothouse Theatre and Merrigong Theatre Company in 2014.

LOUISE AT THE CORNER STORE

Emma Beech SA

Artist and conversationalist Emma Beech met a woman half a decade ago in a cafe, The Corner Store (Melbourne). The woman, a bank worker, asked Emma if she would like to join her; they talked for an hour and swapped numbers. Despite the efforts of both they never managed to catch up again. Five years later Emma was clearing out her phone when she saw a contact called 'Louise at The Corner Store'. Wondering what might have become of Louise in this period of time, Emma thought she would find out.

Louise at the Corner Store extends the artist's extensive practice of making theatre with and about the goodwill of strangers. In an act of trust and generosity Louise has agreed to attend Adhocracy to conduct a meandering conversation, an intense reconnection, and to help make a performance about the experience.

MEZZANINE

New Wave/No Wave is a feminist research project working towards a large visual arts exhibition in 2017, commemorating the 30th anniversary of The Women's Show (Adelaide, 1977), the first contemporary Australia-wide, all-women exhibition. Curators Brigid Noone and Jude Adams are revisiting works associated with the Women's Art Movement (WAM) and The Women's Show, undertaking archiving as an animated process: remembering past works, bringing them into the present and making them anew.

Adhocracy commences the curators' research process through a series of conversations situated around photographs, photocopies and printouts of pages from exhibition catalogues, art magazines and other documentation describing works, debates and ideas relevant to the The Women's Show and WAM. This 'conversation-as-performance' adopts the strategies of consciousness-raising groups of Second Wave feminism as well as referencing art works by artists Ann Marsh and Jane Kent (1980).

Versions of Truth draws on verbatim theatre and live art practices to explore identity, performance, authenticity and representation. Partly based on a shocking and personal real-life story, which is never publicly revealed, artist Tristan Meecham is interested in our relationship to truth and its mercurial nature. Set in an acting audition, Versions of Truth plays with the ethics and role of the actor, as the audition quickly travels down a rabbit hole of deceit.

This second creative development extends the artist's practice in an exciting new direction, from the large-scale participatory art works he is known for, to a more intimate experience that sits within the current wave of performance artists who use themselves as a comic foil to explore uncomfortable and challenging subject matter.

VITALSTATISTIX

PERFORMANCE

PROJECTS

RESIDENCIES

Vitalstatistix (Vitals) is a contemporary arts organisation with a focus on the development and presentation of multidisciplinary, live, new works. We produce new Australian performance and art that is provocative, distinctive and informed.

Each year Vitals offers performance, residencies, projects, events, exhibitions, festival experiences, collaborations with like-minded makers and presenters, and initiatives for South Australian artists. Vitals works from a feminist perspective and has a proud and continuing tradition of supporting women artists.

Vitals is based at the heritage-listed Waterside Workers Hall in Port Adelaide, a place with a strong cultural history. We are a place for contemporary and for community, for big ideas and intimate experiences, for long-term development and hothouse intensity.

VITALS OFFERS A RANGE OF ONGOING INITIATIVES

INCUBATOR

Our residency program, which supports the creative development and premiere of new performance works.

ADHOCRACY

Our annual hothouse for artists and audiences, supporting the development of new experimental artworks.

ADHOCRACY RESIDENCY

An annual residency-based project where guest Australian artists work with South Australian artists on the creative development of a new work.

CONTEMPORARY COMMUNITIES

Community-based, multi-year projects that partner artists with non-artists to make new art and performance.

MOBILE STATES

Vitals is the South Australian member of the Mobile States consortia.

ST. JEROME'S LANEWAY FESTIVAL

Vitals partners with Laneway each year to commission South Australian artists to make works for presentation at the Adelaide-leg of this international music festival.
